YEBISU GARDEN PLACE

Open：May vary by store

Yebisu Garden Place is a large-scale mixed-use complex built in 1994 on the former site of a brewery where Yebisu Beer (now known as Ebisu Beer) was born.
Featuring a hotel, cinema, museum, and a wide variety of restaurants ranging from casual dining to fine establishments, it offers a welcoming space where residents, workers, and visitors can come together comfortably.
With beautifully landscaped plazas showcasing seasonal greenery and elegant architecture in harmony, Yebisu Garden Place is an attractive destination where visitors can discover new experiences and enjoy quality time.

TOKYU STAY Shibuya Ebisu

Closed：open all year round

This park was developed as part of the construction project for Yebisu Garden Place.
Its name comes from the America Bridge, located south of Ebisu Station, which was originally exhibited at the St. Louis World's Fair.
In September 2015, the illuminated monument "Star Ensemble" was installed in the park.
The monument was created by Motoko Ishii, a world-renowned lighting designer.

THE TOKYO TOILET

Public Toilets Like You've Never Seen Before — Now in Shibuya

THE TOKYO TOILET is a public toilet project that aims to create a society that embraces diversity. Seventeen public toilets have been installed across Shibuya City, designed so that everyone can use them comfortably, regardless of gender, age, or disability. Sixteen creators who share this vision took part, using the power of design and creativity to propose a new way for society to be.

A modern-day kawaya, built like playground equipment from 15 walls.

Ebisu Park Toilet

Based on the concept of a "modern-day kawaya" (an old Japanese word for "toilet"), the design draws on the simple, primitive look of earth and wood. Fifteen concrete walls are playfully arranged to create an "ambiguous space" that is both a toilet and an art object.
The gaps between the walls lead into three spaces: the men's, women's, and universal toilets.
The result is a toilet with a unique design that makes visitors feel as if they are playing with a mysterious piece of playground equipment.

Ebisu East Park Toilet

More than just a public toilet, this space works as a park pavilion with a place to rest. It was designed with all kinds of visitors in mind, from children to commuters. The building is split into separate sections, which helps control sightlines and makes the space safe and comfortable.
Ebisu East Park is known as "Octopus Park" because of its octopus-shaped playground slide.
Now it has a new addition: the "Squid Toilet"

Higashi Sanchome Public Toilet

Designed with privacy and safety in mind so that everyone who uses it can feel equally comfortable, this toilet takes its inspiration from "origata" the traditional Japanese art of folding paper to wrap gifts.
Its bright red, the color used for emergencies and warnings, creates a sense of alertness that helps prevent spur-of-the-moment crime. The layout of the stalls, the angle of the entrances, and every design detail all aim to keep users safe and protect their privacy.

3-27-1 Higashi, Shibuya City

A pure white toilet that doesn't stand out too much, built around "everyday thoughtfulness."

As a landmark people see every day in front of the station, this toilet was designed to brighten the mood of everyone using Ebisu Station and leave them feeling refreshed. With a clean, understated look that blends in—in a good way—it is easy to walk into and easy to use.
